Ius Commune Café

The board and the PhD representatives of the Ius Commune Research School find it important that the young researchers of the School, even if they are at home, stay connected and have the opportunity to regularly exchange ideas and discuss their work.

In this regard, the Ius Commune Research School organizes a monthly Ius Commune Café for PhD students.

The Café has the following house rules:

- We would advise you to set this date as an artificial deadline to finish a specific part of your research.
- At the Café you can discuss an idea from your research of the last month with your peers. You can choose the topic yourself. Topics can include an interesting case, a hypothesis, a theory or a provisional research result. Surprise us!
- The setting is informal. It suffices organize your thoughts on a sheet of paper 10 minutes before the meeting starts. The real work should be the part of the research that you want to finish before the meeting.
- Each participant receives a time slot of 20 minutes: 10 minutes for your pitch, and 10 minutes for peer discussion.
- We split up the attendees into fixed groups of 4 or 5 persons to allow you all to participate in each discussion.
- Feel free to ask a colleague from inside or outside the Ius Commune Research School to join, if that would make the Café more interesting to you.
- Don't forget your cup of tea or coffee to our online Café. We can't provide those through the wire.

We hope that this initiative can give an additional boost to your research and keep you on track with your PhD.
